'Where?' 'Lemme See' and So On Means Fresh Air Children Are Not 'Nature Fakers.'

LAUGHTER FILLS WOODS

About 1,900 Boys and Girls Who in Their Daily Lives Rarely Even Smile Enjoy Fortnight Outing.

Skirting the edge of a wood along a country road and hearing a chorus of bird notes you have no doubt looked in vain for the birds. That's not so strange; a thrush may sing for an hour in some retreat and never once show his brown speckled breast. If, however, passing by that same wood you should hear lilting through the branches, not the day songs of birds, but the rippling of childish laughter, and yet, peer as you would through the trees, see no sign of boy or girl or other human form, that would be strange, for boys and girls don't hide themselves amid the high branches of oak and elm and there laugh the hours away.

That strange phenomenon, however, may be found on any summer's day. take the train to Mount Hope and walk or drive up the beautiful road that circles the cemetery, and then continue along the hillside just across the valley from the St. Andrews Golf Club. And when you get about opposite the clubhouse keep your ears alert for something like this 'Ah, ha ha, he he!'

"Uh buh, uh buh, ha ba!"

"O-o-h, it's a woim!" Where? Lemme see. "Gee, looker 'im wiggle

"Ain't woims got feets?" "Te he he! Listen ter the baby! Woims got feets!

'Oh, he he, he he!"

Then you will be sure your ears deceive you, for there's never a child in sight. Strain your eyes as you will, you won't see a thing that looks as though it might be responsible for any of the assorted laughs. But when your amazement has all but got the better of you, climb that steep bank that rises just beyong the stone wall, and when you get to the top, look over. See any laughers

No not quite, only three hundred and fifty. But those three hundred and fifty a regular light hearted battery of fenders of Ashford Hill, they are, send up volley after volley of quick fire laughs. grins and smiles to keep off the arch enemies of this Tribune Fresh Air paradise-dull care and gloom

Think of a vacation blighted by such Not a pleasant thought, is it? Well, that's the reason that Superintendent Austin of Ashford Hill keeps his brain working every minute to devise laughter. And because he's such a good deviser is the reason why you could hear hose laughs floating through the trees at The Rocks to-night. that clothe the "Hill" any time you might chance to pass that way, even though the land does lie so that you ildn't see the groups of girls and boys o produced the sounds.

Ask any Fresh Air who has been at Ashford Hill for an outing if he had a good time, and he will probably say: Gee, a fellow couldn't help it up thereeverybody's always makin' you laugh who, in their daily lives, laugh rarely, if ever, have spent nearly a fortnight at Ashford Hill this year so far. To-day 150 girls will return to their homes from laughing has done for them, go up to the Putnam division station this morning at $:51 and see them come off the train.
